First look: One Day in the Twin Cities

On April 26th, 2014 people in the Twin Cities grabbed cameras and headed out to document life in the metro area for the "One Day in the Twin Cities" project. Here's a first look at just a small portion of the images gathered that day.

The project asks 10 questions for the future of the region as part of a "city-wide, participatory media-creation event." When all the material is gathered, there will be an interactive geo-tagged archive and a TV series on the future of the American city.

The overall project, "One Day on Earth," also took place in Boston, Atlanta, San Francisco and other cities around the country.
